Thanks For The Memory

Take Two Theatre

A World War II review, touring hospitals, homes and clubs.

"Any fears that I had that a programme aimed at evoking war memories would be upsetting or sombre were quite unfounded. I still think that it could have been but the way you handled it, with such a light touch and with so much wit and grace made it an absolute pleasure. There was just the right balance between seriousness and humour, and also between popular songs and more intellectual touches, so that all patients could enjoy it. In fact the whole programme had an intellectual unity which previous concerts have lacked and which makes many of them look quite old-fashioned."
